FOREWORD

The Division of Program Research has followed the development of independent health prepayment plans since the early 1940's as part of its continuing function of identifying and interpreting trends in health insurance generally.

This listing of "independent" health insurance plans is similar to lists of such plans issued by this Division in former years. The list was compiled by the Medical Economics Studies unit. Major work was done by Donald G. Hay under the general direction of Louis S. Reed.

Ida C. Merriam, Director
Division of Program Research

Introduction

This is a listing of the names and addresses, together with code identification of type of sponsorship and group practice status, of so-called "independent" health insurance plans. By this term is meant organizations, which are not Blue Cross or Blue Shield plans or insurance companies, and which directly provide or pay for health services on a group prepayment, risk-spreading basis. The list includes all plans of the sort known to the Division to exist as of June 1962.

These "independent" plans fall into two main groups. Somewhat less than one-fifth of all these plans are prepayment or health insurance plans which, with some minor qualifications, serve the general population of the area. A few plans excepted, these organizations make enrollment available to all individuals or groups, meeting their enrollment requirements, in the area served. The basic purpose of these organizations is the offering of a health prepayment or insurance service to the public.

The remaining four-fifths of the plans are of a different nature. They consist of organizations of employed persons which have developed their own arrangements for providing or paying for medical care required by members of the group and usually their dependents. Most of these plans are operated by jointly (employer-union) managed welfare funds; others are operated by industrial concerns for their employees, by employee beneficial associations or by unions without employer participation.

In the parlance of the insurance industry, these groups have elected to self-insure for some or all of their health services. Some have set up their own facilities (hospitals and/or health centers) to serve members of the group; others simply pay hospitals and physicians for services rendered.

Many plans of this type, it should be understood, are self-insured for only some health services and purchase health insurance for other benefits. Sometimes the services which the group directly provides or pays for are physician service in the office and home, dental care or optical care--services which the group felt could not be obtained advantageously through purchase of insurance.

Periodic Surveys of Independent Plans

The Division of Program Research and its predecessor organization has been making surveys of independent prepayment medical care organizations since 1943. The purpose of such surveys originally was to determine the number, nature and scope of these plans and their enrollment, a function assumed by no other organization.^{1/}

In more recent years an additional function is served. Today these periodic surveys are the sole source of data on enrollment in and income and benefit expenditures of independent plans. The enrollment data are used annually by the Health Insurance Association of America in compiling its annual estimates of persons covered for hospital, surgical and medical expense protection in the United States. The data on income and benefit

^{1/} Publications setting forth the results of these surveys have been as follows: Margaret C. Klem, Prepayment Medical Care Organizations; Bureau of Research and Statistics Memorandum No. 55 (published in 3 editions over the period 1943-45); Agnes W. Brewster, Independent Plans Providing Medical Care and Hospitalization Insurance in 1949 in the United States, Division of Research and Statistics, SSA, Bureau Memorandum No. 72, 1952; Agnes W. Dental society plans--dental prepayment plans sponsored by dental societies.

Private group clinic--plans sponsored by a particular group of physicians and/or dentists practicing as a group, i.e., where a private group clinic offers its services to the public or employed groups on a prepayment basis.

Group practice

The plans are also classified by whether or not service is provided through group practice units of physicians and/or dentists. Plans providing services, to all or a substantial part of the group of persons served, through such organized groups are marked with an asterick (*). Plans providing service through group practice arrangements may include (a) an employer, an employee benefit association, a union, or a jointly (employer-union) managed union welfare fund which has an organized medical service, i.e., provides service through its own facilities staffed by an organized group of physicians and/or dentists; (b) community or consumer sponsored plans which have their own medical facility or facilities with an organized medical staff; and (c) prepayment plans operated by private medical and/or dental group clinics. For the purpose of this classification, group practice is here defined as 3 or more full-time physicians and/or dentists formally organized to provide general medical or dental care, consultation or diagnosis, with income from group practice distributed according to ^{1/} some prearranged plan.

^{1/} See "A Preliminary Directory of Medical Groups in the U.S., 1959," Public Health Service Publication 817, January 1961, p. I.

expenditures of independent plans, along with data provided by Blue Cross-Blue Shield and the insurance industry, enable the Division to make estimates of total income and benefit expenditures of all health insurance carriers in the United States and proportion of private medical care expenditures met by insurance.

Development of List

The list was developed from several sources:

- (1) A list of plans which had responded to earlier surveys made by this Division.
- (2) Names of qualifying plans noted in health insurance literature and in newspaper and magazine articles.
- (3) Names of concerns, employee associations, unions, and welfare funds which self-insure for the provision of health benefits, obtained from the Division of Welfare and Pension Reports, U.S. Department of Labor.
- (4) Other sources including the Association of Railroad Medical Service Executives; Council on Medical Service, American Medical Association; Division of Community Health Services and the Division of Dental Public Health and Resources, Public Health Service; Farmers' Cooperative Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture; and the National Association of Clinic Managers.

A questionnaire was sent in the spring of 1962 to all organizations whose names were thus obtained. About 63 percent of the plans responded. Organizations found to be inactive or not "independent" health plans were deleted from the list. The list includes both respondents and those non-respondent plans which, according to information from other sources, are active.

Classification of Plans

The "independent" health insurance plans listed here have been classified on the basis of sponsorship and whether or not they provide service through group practice.

Sponsorship

A number appearing in parenthesis after the name of each plan designates the type of sponsorship as follows:

- (1) Community
- (2) Employer-employee-union
- (3) Medical society other than Blue Shield
- (4) Dental society
- (5) Private group clinic

Community plans--those sponsored by a community or local consumer group. They include (a) plans under community sponsorship and open to all persons or all groups meeting enrollment requirements in a given community or area and (b) plans organized by local cooperative or consumer groups and designed to serve the members of these groups.

Employer-employee-union plans--include those sponsored by an employing concern, an employee group (e.g., an employee beneficial association composed of the employees of a particular concern), a union, or a jointly managed union-management welfare fund. All such plans serve members of particular employee or union groups and, in many cases, their dependents.

Medical society other than Blue Shield plans--includes plans sponsored by a State, county or local medical society and which are not Blue Shield plans.

Dental society plans--dental prepayment plans sponsored by dental societies.

Private group clinic--plans sponsored by a particular group of physicians and/or dentists practicing as a group, i.e., where a private group clinic offers its services to the public or employed groups on a prepayment basis.

Group practice

The plans are also classified by whether or not service is provided through group practice units of physicians and/or dentists. Plans providing services, to all or a substantial part of the group of persons served, through such organized groups are marked with an asterick (*). Plans providing service through group practice arrangements may include (a) an employer, an employee benefit association, a union, or a jointly (employer-union) managed union welfare fund which has an organized medical service, i.e., provides service through its own facilities staffed by an organized group of physicians and/or dentists; (b) community or consumer sponsored plans which have their own medical facility or facilities with an organized medical staff; and (c) prepayment plans operated by private medical and/or dental group clinics. For the purpose of this classification, group practice is here defined as 3 or more full-time physicians and/or dentists formally organized to provide general medical or dental care, consultation or diagnosis, with income from group practice distributed according to ^{1/} some prearranged plan.

^{1/} See "A Preliminary Directory of Medical Groups in the U.S., 1959," Public Health Service Publication 817, January 1961, p. I.

Summary Information Concerning Plans Listed

This list contains the names of 825 plans. Of these, 76 are community sponsored, 682 are employer-employee-union, 24 are medical society other than Blue Shield, 7 are dental society, and 36 are prepayment plans sponsored by private group clinics. Based on available information, about a fifth of the total plans provide services through group practice. An analysis of the results of the survey and further details regarding the characteristics of respondent plans will be presented in a separate publication.

Acknowledgment

The listing would not be possible if it were not for the cooperation of the officials of the organizations who have this year, as in previous years, filled out the questionnaire sent them by the Division and supplied informational materials. The Division wishes to thank them for their aid.

Limitations of List and Need for More Complete Data

Since no central source for identifying all "independent" plans in the United States exists, a listing of such plans cannot presume to be complete. Undoubtedly other plans exist and this would be true even if much greater efforts were made to find all plans of this nature. Furthermore, the situation is a fluid one. An organization self-insured this month may purchase insurance the next and vice versa.

Despite care, it is probable that some inaccuracies exist in this listing, particularly as regards organizations that did not respond to the questionnaire. It is possible that the list contains some duplications or that a few organizations have been listed which are no longer active or are not really independent plans within the terms of the definition used. However, it is believed that such inaccuracies are relatively minor.

Information will be appreciated on any existing plan not included in this listing or any inaccuracies in the listing. Such information should be addressed to Mr. Louis S. Reed, Chief, Medical Economics Studies, Division of Program Research, Social Security Administration, U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Washington 25, D.C.
